

About the Authors

Caroline Adolphsen is an associate professor at Aarhus University and holds a chair for the UNCRC Policy Center. She works at the Department of Law and is also a lecturer at the educational facilities for physiotherapists, nurses and paediatricians. Caroline has been a guest scholar and lecturer at The Faculty of Law, University of Bergen, and has received post.doc.-funding from The Danish Research Council. Caroline's writing has appeared in both national and international publications as well as in reports for decision makers and books for students.

Edoardo Ales (1968) is a full professor of European, Comparative and Italian Labour Law at the University of Cassino and Southern Lazio. He teaches also in Rome (LUISS – G. Carli) and in Vienna (Wirtschaftsuniversität). He is a member of the Scientific Committee and national expert for Italy for the European Labour Law Network. He has published and edited several books on individual and collective Labour Law as well as Health and Safety Law. He is the author of several essays on international and national Labour and Social Security Law journals. He is co-editor of the Rivista del Diritto della Sicurezza Sociale.

Laura Boddez (1989) studied law at the Katholieke Universiteit Leuven (KU Leuven) where she graduated in 2012 with a master in criminal and civil law. Since then, she has been working at the Centrum voor Biomedische Ethiek en Recht (Centre for biomedical ethics and law, KU Leuven) as a volunteering affiliated researcher. She joined the Brussels bar in October 2013.

Pascal Borry is an assistant professor of bioethics at the Centre for Biomedical Ethics and Law (University of Leuven, Belgium). His main research activities are concentrated on the ethical, legal and social implications of genetic and genomics. He is programme director of a Master of Bioethics at the University of Leuven. He is a member of the Belgian Consultative Committee on Bioethics and expert of the Superior Health Council. Within the European Society of Human Genetics he is a board member and involved in the Professional and Public Policy Committee. He is Invited Scholar at the Center for Genomics and Policy of McGill University.

Benedikt Buchner is a Professor of Civil Law, Health Law and Medical Law at the University of Bremen and Director of the Institute for Information, Health and Medical Law. Before joining the Bremen Law Faculty in 2005, he worked at the Universities of Munich and Augsburg where he received his Ph.D. in law in 1997. He obtained an LL.M. from the University of California Los Angeles in 2002 and completed his habilitation thesis at the University of Munich in 2005. He is the author of numerous publications on health law and information law and Editor of the Journal DuD (Data Protection and Data Security).

Martin Buijsen MA, LL.M, Ph.D is professor of Health Law at the Erasmus School of Law and the Institute of Policy and Management of Health Care (Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands). He studied law and philosophy before obtaining a Ph.D at Erasmus University. His research extends to all areas of health law. Martin Buijsen is especially interested in issues relating to access to health care.

Stefaan Callens obtained his Master's Degree in law from the KU Leuven (Belgium) in 1989. He studied at the Université de Poitiers (France) and obtained a Master of Laws degree from the American Duke University in 1990. His doctoral thesis was received in 1995 by the KU Leuven and he has since then been a Professor of Health law at the Faculty of Medicine of the same university. He founded Callens Law Firm in 2000. Stefaan regularly publishes books and contributions concerning the organization of health care, hospital legislation, pharmaceutical legislation and e-health.

Filip Chichevaliev graduated from the Faculty of Law in Skopje. His interest in public law, and health law in particular, started when working at the Law Firm "Chichevaliev & Ilijovski". For three years now, he has been working as a consultant for the Federal Public Service for Home Affairs (Macedonia), and the General Directorate Aliens' Office, Belgium, and is engaged in legal research on healthcare access in Macedonia.

Snezhana Chichevalieva has worked for 25 years in public health policy and law, before joining the World Health Organization, Regional Office for Europe Copenhagen (Denmark). She is a native of Skopje, Republic of Macedonia. She has been involved in the development of the International Health Regulations and Framework Agreement for Tobacco Control. Her interest lies in bringing together global, regional and national public health policy and law developments for the benefit of the people. She is the author of "Developing a Framework for Public Health Law in Europe".

Giuseppe Cricenti, is a judge at the Supreme Court of Italy, and also professor of Private Law at the Rome University. He founded "Biodiritto", a Review of Bioethics and Law, of which he's Editor in Chief. He has written numerous articles and books concerning civil law and bioethics, including "I diritti sul corpo" (Napoli, 2009) e "Il sè e l'altro. Bioetica del diritto civile" (Pisa, 2013).

Aude Croonenberghs (1987) studied law at the Katholieke Universiteit Brussel, where she graduated in 2010 with a master in international and European law. She has worked for UNESCO in Paris, and joined the Brussels bar in February 2011.

Stéphanie Dagon is a full professor and a Swiss National Science Foundation-Professor (SNSF) at the law faculty and at the Global Studies Institute of the University of Geneva. She works in the fields of global health and international and European social security. She has been working since September 2013 on a large-scale project entitled “Juridification of Global Health Concerns: implications for health prevention, treatment and health systems”. Between 2009 and 2013, Stéphanie carried out post-doctoral work at the Institute of Biomedical Ethics of the University of Zurich in the field of the regulation of medicines.

Anne-Marie Duguet MD, PhD in law, emeritus Senior Lecturer at Paul Sabatier University. She conducts her research in the INSERM Unit 1027 Epidemiology and Public health analysis: “Risks, chronic diseases and handicaps”. She has conducted research projects for the Ministry of Health and participated in several European and International projects. She is a member of the advisory board of the European Journal of health law and Secretary of the European Association of Health Law. She has published more than 180 scientific articles and edited or contributed to 25 books. In 2011, she was honoured by the decoration of “the Palmes Académiques”.

Murray Earle is a freelance medico-legal scholar. He took degrees in Law, International Relations, and Comparative Literature, before settling on Medical Jurisprudence at the University of Edinburgh School of Law. Following a lectureship in Medical Law and Ethics at Glasgow University School of Law, he worked as a Senior Researcher at the Scottish Parliament. He currently develops and teaches on different online medico-legal Masters degree modules at the University of Edinburgh, including (in) Law & Medical Ethics and (in) European Health Care Law.

Eberhard Eichenhofer (1950) studied law and political sciences in Tübingen and Saarbrücken (1971 – 1975) and received his PhD in 1979. From 1982 – 1989, he worked as a researcher at the Max-Planck-Institute for Foreign and International Social law. In 1989, he was appointed as Professor for Civil law and Social Welfare and Social Security Law at the University of Osnabrück (Germany), and Professor for Social Welfare and Social security and Civil law at the Friedrich-Schiller-University of Jena (Germany) since 1977. He has written various books and articles on Social Security and Social Welfare Law in Germany and Europe, recent key publications on social human rights (2012) and the law of the activating welfare state (2013)

André den Exter (1966) is a lecturer in Health law and holds a Jean Monnet chair on EU Health Law at the Institute of Health Policy and Management, Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands. Recently, he received a visiting professorship on International and European Health Law at Danylo Medical University Lviv, Ukraine. He has (co)edited several books and published various articles on healthcare and human rights, pharmaceutical law, international and EU health law.

Sara Fovargue is a Reader in Law at Lancaster University and has research and teaching interests in health care law and ethics, and family law – particularly relating to children. She is interested in issues raised at the intersection of these areas and in decision-making processes and practices for those considered ‘vulnerable’. She has published on legal and ethical issues relating to conscientious objection, biotechnologies and reproduction, xenotransplantation, regulation and issues surrounding consenting to risk. Her monograph on xenotransplantation was published by CUP in 2012 and a co-edited collection exploring the legitimacy of medical treatment by Routledge in 2016.

Austen Garwood-Gowers is a Reader in Health Law and Ethics at Nottingham Trent University in the United Kingdom. He teaches medical law on the undergraduate law degrees and specialized modules on Medical Use of the Human Body and Beginning and Ending of Life at Masters level. He leads the Health law and Ethics Group within the Law School. Dr Garwood-Gowers has published extensively in this field, particularly around issues of consent, transplantation, medical research and human rights. He supervises a number of doctoral students and has participated and helped to manage funded research projects examining the legal and ethical aspects of living donor organ transplantation, capacity and the interaction of faith and belief with healthcare law.

Iris Goldner Lang, LL.M (London School of Economics), PhD (University of Zagreb), is a Jean Monnet professor of EU Law and the Chair-holder of the UNESCO Chair “Free Movement of People, Migration and Inter-Cultural Dialogue” at the University of Zagreb, Croatia. Prof. Goldner Lang has been a leader of the Jean Monnet Modules “EU Migration Law and Policy” and “EU Internal Market Law” at the University of Zagreb. She is editor of three books and author of a number of articles, chapters in books and a book “From Association to Accession: How Free is the Free Movement of Persons in the EU”.

Nathalie De Grove-Valdeyron is a senior lecturer at the University of Toulouse (and researcher at the IRDEIC) where she teaches European Union law, in the two aspects: institutions and instruments. She is the director of Diploma of law of the European Union and co-director of the European School of Law of Toulouse. She is the author of a textbook on the law of the European internal market (4th ed, LGDJ 2014) and on the European Health Law (LGDJ 2013). She contributes to the “Repertoire communautaire Dalloz” (public health and medicines), and to the “Annuaire de droit de l’Union Européenne” (chronicle of public health).

Aart Hendriks is a professor in Health Law at Leiden University, health lawyer for the Royal Dutch Medical Association, substitute judge at the District Court of Rotterdam, member of the board of Supervisors of Erasmus Medical Centre and Zaanse Medical Centre, board member of various national and international non-governmental organisations (NGO’s) working in the field of health, disability and human rights law, and editor of several academic journals.

Janne Rothmar Herrmann (PhD) is an Associate Professor in biolaw at the Faculty of Law, University of Copenhagen. Her research interests include biolaw & bioethics, reproductive rights, conscientious objections, beginning and ending of life, and privacy & technology. During 2010-2015 she was a Member of the Nordic Committee on Bioethics by appointment by the Nordic Council of Ministers, and has previously served on the Board of Directors of the European Association of Health Law.

Pauline Jacobs (1982) is Assistant Professor in criminal law and criminal procedure at the W.P.J. Pompe Institute for Criminal Law and Criminology of Utrecht University, The Netherlands. She is also affiliated with the Montaigne Centre for Judicial Administration and Conflict Resolution at the same university. In 2012, she obtained her PhD with a thesis entitled ‘Force-Feeding of Prisoners and Detainees on Hunger Strike. Right to Self-Determination versus Right to Intervention’ at Tilburg University. In current research, she focuses on criminal law and human rights, criminal sanctioning and penitentiary law.

Eszter Kismödi is an international human rights lawyer, specialized in sexuality, gender, sexual and reproductive health and human rights. She holds a Master of Laws (LLM) from the University of Toronto Law School and a law degree (JD) from the University of Law, Pécs, Hungary. Currently, she is a visiting fellow at the Global Health Justice Partnership of the Yale Law School and Yale School of Public Health. She works as an independent human rights lawyer for a number of UN agencies and international organizations. She published extensively in international journals, and she is the author of and contributor to several WHO publications.

Rob Kottenhagen, LL.M PhD is an associate professor at the Erasmus School of Law at Erasmus University Rotterdam (The Netherlands). He has more than 30 years of experience in lecturing and research. Currently he is working at the department Law and Health Care. His research is on legal issues of pregnancy and childbirth, medical liability and liability for psychological and psychiatric harm. These topics are studied in the context and perspective of comparative law.

Paula Lobato de Faria has a degree in Law (Faculty of Law of the University of Lisbon), a DEA in health law (University of Bordeaux) and a PhD in Law (Montesquieu University and NOVA University). She is an Associate professor of the National School of Public Health at NOVA (Lisbon), and coordinates the PhD in Public Health and the Department of Social Sciences in Health in the same School. From 1998 to 2002 she coordinated the National Committee of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education in Portugal. She is the author of ‘Medical Law in Portugal’ (International Encyclopaedia of Laws).

Aleksandar Marsavelski is an assistant professor at the chair of Criminal Law, of the faculty of Law, University of Zagreb (Croatia). He graduated in 2008 (summa cum laude). In 2012, he obtained his LLM degree at Yale Law School (USA). He completed his PhD (summa cum laude) in a joint degree programme at the University of Freiburg (Germany), supported by the Max Planck Institute for Foreign and International Criminal Law’s doctoral scholarship (2014-2015). In 2016, he received the Annual Best Young Scientist’s Paper Award from the Society of University Professors, Scholars and Other Scientists in Zagreb (Croatia).

Jean McHale researches and writes in the area of Health Care law. She is the Director of the Centre for Health Law, Science & Policy at Birmingham Law School and is one of the academic directors of the University of Birmingham Policy Commission, Healthy Ageing in the 21st Century. Professor McHale is also the co-grant holder of an AHRC research network grant “The Changing Demands of Beauty” from January 2015- June 2016. She is also a co-grant holder on the National Institute for Health Research grant “Understanding employee whistleblowing in health care”.

Stefania Negri is an associate professor of International Law at the Law School of the University of Salerno, Italy. She holds a Jean Monnet Chair in European Health, Environment and Food Safety Law (2016-2019) and she is the founder and director of the Observatory on Human Rights: Bioethics, Health, Environment (www.odubsa.unisa.it). She is the director of the International Summer School on Law, Bioethics and Health and of the ELSA Law School on International and European Environmental Law.

Solvita Olsena (Dr.iur., MD) is a leading health lawyer in Latvia with long experience both in academia and in legal practice. She is an assistant professor at the University of Latvia, director of Medical Law Institute and practicing attorney at law. Her academic interests include patients’ rights, privacy, health data protection, right to health in global and national perspective, and protection of the human body. She has been participating in numerous international research and teaching projects in the field of health law.

William Onzivu is a tenured Lecturer in Law at the University of Bradford, School of Law in the United Kingdom. He is on leave of absence assigned to the staff of the World Health Organization Regional Office for Africa (Brazzaville, Congo) providing legal technical assistance to WHO Africa Region member states. Previously (2000-2007), he was a Legal Officer with the World Health Organization Headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. He holds a PhD in Law from the University of Stirling (UK), an LL.M. from the London School of Economics and Political Science (UK) and an LL.B. from Makerere University (Uganda).

André Pereira is Professor of Law at the University of Coimbra (Portugal), where he also holds a Master of Laws about “Informed Consent” and a PhD in Law under the title “Patients’ Rights and Medical Liability”. He is Director of the Centre for Biomedical Law and Researcher at the University of Coimbra Institute for Legal Research. He is a member of the National Ethics Committee for Clinical Research, and was elected by the National Parliament as Member of the National Council of Ethics for Life Sciences. Pereira published extensively in various international journals and books.

Sunčana Roksandić Vidlička (PhD) is an assistant professor at the Department of Criminal Law, Faculty of Law, University in Zagreb. In 2015 she obtained a doctorate degree from the Max Planck Institute of Foreign and International Criminal Law (summa cum laude). She is the Head of the Croatian Unit of the International Network of the UNESCO Chair in Bioethics. She is founder and academic mentor of the patients’ rights group at the Law Clinic, Faculty of law, Zagreb. She teaches Criminal Law, Bioethics and Human Rights, Medical Law, EU Criminal Law and the Protection of Victims (Jean Monnet Course).

Henriette Roscam Abbing is emeritus professor of health law (university of Maastricht, university of Utrecht, The Netherlands) and was a legal advisor to the Minister of Health. She has special expertise in international (European) health law. She has been a member of the Council of Europe’s Public Health Committee and Committee on Bioethics. She co-authored the WHO-Declaration on the rights of the patient. She is one of the editors of the European Journal of Health Law. She was a cofounder of the European Association of Health Law, of which she is at present the Chair.

Janne Rothmar Herrmann (PhD) is an Associate Professor in bio-law at the Faculty of Law, University of Copenhagen. Her research interests include bio-law & bioethics, reproductive rights, conscientious objections, beginning and ending of life, and privacy & technology. During 2010-2015 she was a Member of the Nordic Committee on Bioethics by appointment by the Nordic Council of Ministers, and has previously served on the Board of Directors of the European Association of Health Law.

Ralph Sandland was educated at the University of Kent and Trinity Hall, Cambridge. In 1990 he took up a lecturing post in the School of Law at the University of Nottingham, where he is currently Professor of Law and Difference. His research interests encompass medical law, disability law, family law, gender, and the rights of minorities, and he has published widely in all these fields. Together with Professor Peter Bartlett, Ralph is the author of the leading UK mental health law textbook Mental Health Law, Policy and Practice (4th ed, Oxford University Press, 2013).

Mahsa Shabani has a Bachelor in Law and LL.M in Public Law and a Postgraduate Master in Bioethics. Her main research interest revolves around legal, ethical and social aspects of genetic testing and genomic research. Since September 2012 she has been working at the Center for Biomedical Ethics and Law at University of Leuven. Currently, she is conducting a PhD project on the ethical and legal challenges of data sharing in genomic research. She is also collaborating with a number of European and International projects such as the Regulatory and Ethics Working Group of Global Alliance for Genomics and Health.

Dominique Sprumont, is a professor of Health law at the Law Faculty of the University of Neuchâtel (Switzerland). Founder and Deputy Director of the Institute of Health Law. He is also vice-director of the Swiss School of Public Health (SSPH+). Dominique is an expert in the field of patients' rights and public health law, he has written more than 100 scientific publications, articles and book chapters on those issues. He has also collaborated in the drafting of numerous legislations in those fields at the cantonal, Swiss and European level. Since 2006, he has been coordinating the TRREE initiative that provides free and open access to online training in research ethics and regulation (<http://elearning.tree.org>).

Keith Syrett is a Professor of Public Health Law at Cardiff University, UK. His research lies at the intersection of health policy, bioethics, politics and law. He has a particular interest in decision-making on the allocation of scarce health care resources, and the law's response to this. He has published widely on this topic, on issues relating to health technology assessment (in particular, the work of the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE)), and on public health law. He is a committee member of the Wellcome Trust, a fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine, and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts.

Magdalena Tulibacka holds a PhD in Law (London) and a Magister Iuris degree in Polish Law (University of Nicolas Copernicus, Toruń). She is an Associate Research Fellow at the University of Oxford's Centre for Socio-Legal Studies (European and Comparative Civil Justice Systems Programme), and an Adjunct Professor in EU Law at Emory Law School, Atlanta. Her research involves: comparative, EU and Central European (especially: Polish) consumer law and product liability law; Polish tort law, contract law, civil procedure and ADR; collective redress and class actions in Europe; and European harmonization of laws.

Dorothea Touwen is a senior lecturer medical ethics at the department of Medical Ethics and Health Law of the Leiden University Medical Centre. Her research focuses on care for the elderly, medical decision making at the end of life, the role of family members in health care and the position of migrant patients in palliative care. She is a member of a regional euthanasia review committee and several Institutional Review Boards. She has extensive experience with clinical ethics in combination with health law issues, and with moral deliberation in health care institutions.

Kenneth Watson, MD MBA MSc LLM is an independent healthcare consultant in a.o. healthcare management, patient/medication safety and pharmaceutical law. He has more than 20 years of international pharmaceutical industry experience in the worldwide development, registration, marketing and post-marketing surveillance of innovative drugs. Next to his client-driven consultancy work he gives (guest) lectures at the Erasmus University Rotterdam (NL) and at the Universities of Applied Sciences in Amsterdam and Ede (NL). Currently he is also working on a PhD Thesis about 'Safety & Liability in Childbirth in The Netherlands' at the Institute of Health Policy and Management, Erasmus University Rotterdam (NL).